Anadarko announces huge drilling and exploration programs for 2001 - 2002

Tuesday's open house in Elk Point saw Anadarko Canada Corporation announce a massive drilling and exploration program, with capital expenditures in excess of $270 million over the next four years, $80 million of this in 2001.

Up to 100 square miles of three dimensional seismic surveys and drilling of up to 55 wells are slated for the Kehewin area next year, with another 165 wells to be drilled in 2002, while up to 145 wells are to be drilled in the Moose Hills section.

A display explaining the upcoming seismic exploration shows a proposal for 30.70 square kilometers of 3-D in the Elk Point, another 186 square kilometers in the Kehewin area and 106.5 square kilometers elsewhere, along with 58.4 km of two-dimensional seismic.

BIG PLANS - Anadarko Canada Corporation's Dan Krantz explains plans for upcoming exploration and development to Town Councillor Dennis Jasinsky and another interested visitor at Anadarko's well-attended open house.

A vast area stretching north to Highway 28 A and from Bentley Lake in the west to Lindbergh in the east is being considered for reduced well spacing in the future. The company is presently working on reduced spacing on 15 sections east of Elk Point, according to spokesman Warren McIlwain. "There are definitely a few more years of work in this area," he said.

The exploration and development program will provide employment both with Anadarko and contractors, and local trades and suppliers will be used where possible.

Other displays at the open house used a series of photos to show the various steps in drilling and completing wells and maps showing the trucking routes. A display on production and ongoing operation included jars of oil extracted in various parts of the local oilfield, including a sample from a well recently drilled in the Kehewin area, where the oil is so thick that sand remains ribboned through it, rather than sinking to the bottom of the jar as in several other samples. A display on safety and environmental protection showed open house visitors the "sniffer" used to monitor levels of hydrogen sulfide gas and a meter which clearly showed variations in noise levels as people spoke nearby. James Makowski, in charge of this display, said Anadarko is constantly working toward a quieter operation. Mufflers on gas motors driving well pumps, sound barriers of bales and sound walls have been installed, and motor buildings have been positioned to direct noise away from nearby buildings. Initiatives to electrify wells are also underway.

Among the visitors to the open house were 63 Grade 10 and 11 students from F. G. Miller High School. Mike Meyenburg said they asked "pretty good questions" about the company's operations, while Ted Yarmuch added that the students showed a sincere interest in career opportunities in the oil industry.

The open house brought both town and rural residents in to learn about the upcoming developments and the impact these will have on their lives as more and more Anadarko wells are developed in the Elk Point area, some of them immediately adjacent to the town limits.

High achievers honored

Awards Night at F. G. Miller

Students of F. G. Miller Junior/Senior High School were praised for their achievements in the 1999-2000 school year at last Tuesday's Awards Night.

Eva Gusnowski and Brad Young shared the honor of Top Junior High Academic Standings for awards sponsored by St. Paul Education Regional Division #1 and F. G. Miller High School, while Tanya Pankiw, who also won the Alberta Treasury Branch Top Grade 11 Academic Achievement award, was named winner of the K. C. Miller award for the school's Best-All-Round Student.

Leanne Wilson, winner of the Top Grade 10 Academic Achievement award sponsored by Elk Point Insurance and Realty also received the Governor General's History Medal for the Millennium, and awards for Senior French, Senior High Computer Processing, Senior High Home Economics and Career and Life Management award. These awards were sponsored by Hilltop Cafe, Hillside Service, Empress Restaurant and Elk Point Lions Club.

The Bruce Smith Memorial Award, for a Grade 10 student who is a helpful and caring person, particularly helpful to younger students, was presented by Lucille Smith to Ronald Kulczycki, while the C. J. Petroleum Personal Achievement Award went to Ryan Davie for dedication and hard work which moved him closer to working at his potential.

Sports awards sponsored by the Elk Point Elks Lodge went to Junior High students Sarah Goulet and Garrett Poulin, and Senior High students Tori Warawa and Brian Poitras.

Citizenship awards went to: Junior High - Kirsty Lindquist, sponsored by Dr. Drew Ramful (Honorable mentions: John Braga, Moriah Brunner, Brett Hahn, Eva Gusnowski, Jonathan Buryn, Tanya Orr, Nichole Havener, Ashley Hebblethwaite, Brad Young, Colton Hoffman, Travis Lindquist, Tasha Yopyk, Amanda Zapesocki); Senior High - Terina Nixon, sponsored by Dr. Jonathan Adams (Honorable Mentions: Brian Poitras,

BEST ALL ROUND STUDENT - Tanya Pankiw was presented with the Best-All-Round Student award by Dr. Ken Miller, grandson of Elk Point pioneer doctor F. G. Miller, after whom the school was named, and son of Dr. K. C. Miller, who sponsors the award.

Thanksgiving Monday is coming up October 9

By Deanna Easthope
FCSS Director

Yes, September is passed and October has arrived. This coming Monday is our Canadian Thanksgiving Day, a day celebrated in many homes with the traditional "Thanksgiving turkey" and all the trimmings. It is also a day we celebrate with family and friends. A special time and a special day. Thanksgiving is a family time. For those of you who are away from your families and know you will be unable to be with them at Thanksgiving time - call or write them. It is important to connect with one another.

Families are important. We often assume that family relationships are the responsibility of parents, but harmony in the home is a two way street, and children have to do their part as well. Behavior occurs in patterns, and it is not uncommon for families to experience cycles of conflicts, mood changes, or failed communication. When there are problems, we are all at fault because our individual behaviors fit together and feed on each other. But on an individual level, each family member is responsible for his or her choices. This characteristic of interconnectedness makes the family a unique system, but it also means autonomy. All family members need to be well acquainted with the law of consequences - of cause and effect. We have to obey financial truths if we want to prosper. We have to obey laws of the land or society will crumble. The law of consequences is one of the most basic principles of heaven and earth, and it can be applied to virtually every aspect of our lives.

It's also possible for a family to have too much closeness. Members can have a powerful sense of belonging and feel great to be together, but they shouldn't give up their individual law of consequences - of cause and effect. We have to obey financial truths if we want to prosper. We have to obey laws of the land or society will crumble. The law of consequences is one of the most basic principles of heaven and earth, and it can be applied to virtually every aspect of our lives.

All family members share the responsibility of family relationships. And as children grow up and leave home, they must do their part to nurture parental relationships: visits, phone calls, remembering special occasions, keeping in touch.

Today when family life is being challenged, we need to emphasize more than ever the absolutely essential nature of the family as an institution of civilization - as the foundation of nations.

When a family functions well, it can be a never-ending source of love, strength, and growth for its members. Strong family relationships provide a long and rich harvest. And what greater fruit than strong family bonds as we grow older together. Good family life is the ultimate joy of our existence, for where our treasures are, there will our hearts be also. ...Happy Thanksgiving, everyone!

Operation Impact goes Saturday

By Cst. Peter Beardy
Elk Point RCMP

Once again, on October 7, 2000, RCMP Elk Point will be participating in "Operation Impact." Operation Impact is a 24-hour, national coast-to-coast, traffic safety and enforcement program.

Why do we have Operation Impact? National research clearly identifies two high-risk behaviors are killing and injuring people on our roads. Operation Impact focuses on those behaviors: namely, on the non-seat belt wear and the impaired driver. This is the tenth year of this national campaign. This is the first year 20 American states will also participate, making it an international strategy.

Car crashes kill almost 3000 people and injure 220,000 more across Canada. Those motorists who fail to understand, or choose to ignore the dangers of high-risk driving, either by continuing to drink and drive and/or refusing to buckle up, put their lives and the lives of others at risk.

Operation Impact's key messages are: "The greatest threat to public safety is the impaired driver," and "The most effective way to save your life is to buckle up."

Members of the Elk Point RCMP and the St. Paul Highway Patrol will be out looking for those high-risk drivers in and around Elk Point, Frog Lake, Fishing Lake and points in between, either by check stops or during patrol. So, DONT drink and drive and DO buckle up.

■ Newspaper Week 2000: We've come a long way...

Elk Point Review enters the electronic age

A NEW MEANING FOR "GOING TO PRESS" is demonstrated by Lorraine Samboryk as she prepares to send a completed page of the Elk Point Review to the printers in St. Albert with a click of her mouse.

Keeping up with the times

New technology... we have to love it, even though at times it's confusing and even annoying. For example, the page you are reading was laid out in less than five minutes, rather than the 30 minutes we used to allow per page back in the days of cut and paste layout.

We didn't have to wait for the pictures to be developed, or even scanned... they were taken with a digital camera and fed directly into the computer.

We didn't have to wait for a proofreader to read through the long story about our changing technology - the automatic spell checker immediately put a red line under any word we spelled wrong, and a green line under anything it thought was questionable grammar, so we could fix it on the spot.

Nor was it a problem to pop the large, decorated letters into the story at the beginning of a paragraph. One click took out the indent on the line, another made the letter three lines high, a third changed the type style and a fourth put a shadow behind the letter. That sort of embellishment just wouldn't have been possible with our old technology.

Finally, the headline on this editorial - just one click and it was the perfect size to fit the available space. We loved laying out papers the traditional way, but this way is even better.

The Elk Point Review has come a long way since it hit the news stands and mailboxes back in 1984. Join us for a short Newspaper Week trip down Memory Lane....

Back in those days, the news was first written on a manual typewriter, and once a stack of stories was accumulated, they and the advertising would be hauled up to St. Paul. A narrow room at the back of the St. Paul Journal held a row of large machines called "Comp 4s" where the typesetters copied the stories and ads we had written onto a special type of film. A large cartridge, like a giant photo film, was then removed from the side of the machine and the film fed into the side of another large-deepfreeze-sized machine which then spit out our stories in long, long, damp strips. These were dried on a large heated surface before they went to the proofreaders, who would read every word and mark any errors, sending them back to the typesetters for correction.

The corrected strips of type were hung from big clips on hooks labeled for each section of the St. Paul Journal and for the Lakeland Review, as it was known at the time. The strips for ads went to the layout people who would cut and paste, adding artwork from cut books and borders to create the look they wanted.

Once the ads and typesetting were completed, the next step was to paste up the pages. First the ads, and then the long strips of type trimmed to one- or two-column width, and pasted on the big blue-lined layout sheets. Then it was time to typeset the headlines on another version of the Comp 4 called a "headliner." As I learned to lay out and paste up my own pages, I learned to guess at the size of type which would fit across the space allotted for a headline.

Photo film was developed in our own darkroom and printed, negative size, onto contact sheets, on which we marked with a china marking pen which photos we wanted and what size. The darkroom technician then printed them up in dotted half-tones and they were cut and pasted to the layout sheets as well, in borders painstakingly formed with narrow rolls of line tape.

As time went by, the Journal acquired their first computers, and the typesetters learned to use those in place of the Comp 4s. The Journal reporters also got computers and were able to type their stories directly into them. The disks from those went directly into the processor, and again, came out in strips of type.

Another huge computer was used to typeset and lay out printing jobs, and eventually there was no more use for the massive Linotype machine which spit out rows of metal type. I remember the sad day it was hauled away and I was given a strip of that type spelling out my name as a souvenir. Back before my time, I believe the newspaper was set by Linotype as well.

A few years later, computer technology advanced to the point where ads could be laid out completely on computer, using artwork from CD-ROM versions of the cut-books. At the same time, came the first steps to laying out pages on computer. We could now mark off the spaces for our ads and photos, make borders and captions for the photos, and fill text boxes with our stories and headlines, retrieved from the "editorial" folders on our computers. Proofreading was now only necessary for ads, as the computers' spell-checkers did the job on our stories.

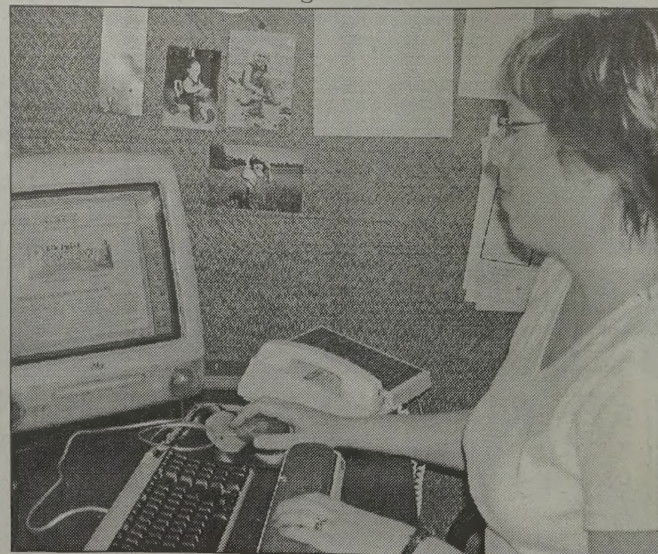

Next came the technology which allowed negatives to be scanned by the computer, and brought onto the pages - no more painstaking cutting and pasting needed. Most recently, we have been also transporting the advertising onto the pages by the same method, producing pages that are pasted onto the layout sheets in one piece, with nothing to fall off as they make their way to St. Albert for printing.

This week sees the next step into the electronic age, as our pages are sent to St. Albert almost instantly, via modem. Production manager Lorraine Samboryk will take the completed pages, group all their segments for transmission, and send them off in much the same way you would send an e-mail. Seconds later, they will arrive in St. Albert, ready to be opened on their computers and printed off as negatives, ready to go to press.

This new method has only one downside. To avoid last minute network jams, we must send as many pages as possible to St. Albert on Friday to allow them time to retrieve and set them up. Only the pages with coverage of weekend events, the final page of classified to allow the addition of last-minute ads, and the church page, to allow addition of obituaries, will be sent on press day. Therefore, we will have to strictly enforce our deadlines for advertising and news copy so these pages can be sent at the appropriate time. However, the increased efficiency will more than make up for this, and we will all - advertisers, writing and layout staff - soon be used to having everything done on time. With your cooperation, we can end up with a more efficient operation and a better final product.

We would also like to take this time to introduce you to a new news product: the Elk Point Review now has a web page. Each week, our key front page stories and photos will be transported by Journal editor Rhonda Lafrance onto the web page, where readers all around the world will be able to find out what the top headlines of the week are right here in Elk Point. Check this one out for yourself at www.spjournal.com when you click on the Elk Point Review icon.

Elk Point Further Education courses starting

Elk Point Further Education is back in business for the fall season, with courses starting this week. Here are some of the great classes you can attend:

ToneN'Stretch is an excellent way to improve your flexibility and muscle tone at any age, and instructor Cindy Casper makes it all seem like fun. Dates to be announced.

Painting Group - Painting is more fun when you work with a group. Bring your own projects and ideas for four Monday sessions, which started last week and continue October 16 and 23 from 7 to 10 p.m.

Creative Memories - This one night session on the techniques used in scrapbooking or creating a photo collage, instructed by Kathy Lovell and Becky Waltze goes Tuesday, October 19 from 7 to 10 p.m.

Reiki - the ancient healing art which can be practiced on yourself or others for stress reduction, relaxation, improved health and quality of life is taught by Terri Ehlert and will be covered in three levels on the weekend of October 27 through 30.

And don't forget our Craft Club and Quilt Club are back again!

Call Verona Lea at 724-4101 for more information on any of the courses, or to register.

ALBERTA MENTAL HEALTH BOARD

Mental illness is Alberta's Number One health disability.

Mental illness strikes more Albertans than breast cancer, diabetes or Alzheimer's disease.

In fact, mental illness is the number one health disability across the country.

Chances are, you'll miss more work due to mental health problems than heart disease or accidents.

Do you know enough about the illness that,
one day, might hit close to home?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1 Mental illness only happens to people with a family history.

FALSE Mental illness strikes one in five Albertans. Some illnesses can be triggered by environment – such as the amount of stress in a person's life, or difficult personal relationships.

2 Too much stress can lead to mental illness.

TRUE Stress can lead to all types of health problems such as anxiety disorders, back and neck pain, or headaches. If stress gets out of control or lasts for too long, it can lead to depression, which is a mental illness. Stress by itself isn't a mental illness.

3 People can work through mental illness.

TRUE AND FALSE. Some people, with the right environment and circumstances, can overcome mental illness on their own. But many people will need some kind of treatment sooner or later. Getting treatment doesn't mean you're weak or sicker than others.

4 Only weak people get mental illness.

FALSE Mental illness affects people from all walks of life. People who don't cope well with stress are especially vulnerable. So are people who have troubled personal relationships. And so are people who have very high expectations of themselves – whether career, family or financial expectations. Often mental illness affects the people you'd least expect.

5 Workplace stress causes mental illness.

FALSE Dealing with workplace stress is unique to each individual. Most people who develop a mental illness find their problems stem from several areas of their life, such as relationships, finances and work issues.

6 You can help prevent mental illness.

TRUE Two things make a big difference: (a) Choosing to live well and manage life stresses; and (b) Maintaining healthy, supportive relationships with others.

WHAT IS MENTAL ILLNESS?

Mental illness can range from mild to serious, affecting the individual's health and relationships in a significant way.

Anxiety and phobias are examples of mental disorders. People with these disorders may have trouble sleeping, concentrating or maintaining their appetite.

Schizophrenia and depression are more serious illnesses that can cause more severe symptoms such as feeling hopeless or suicidal.

WHAT CAUSES MENTAL ILLNESS?

Mental illness is not caused by a weak personality or character flaw. Most mental illness is caused by:

- Biochemical processes in the brain
- Genes or heredity
- Reaction to trauma
- Prolonged exposure to stressful environments.

COMMON SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

Following are common signs and symptoms of mental illness.

- Sleeping more (or less)
- Feeling tired or overwhelmed
- Frequent fears or worries
- Panic or anxiety attacks
- Feeling restless or agitated
- Feeling hopeless or worthless
- Loss of appetite, or weight loss or gain
- Loss of pleasure in ordinary activities
- Increased use of drugs, alcohol or medications
- Frequent angry outbursts
- Excessive crying
- Increased or decreased sexual drive
- Racing thoughts or rapid speech
- Thoughts of death or suicide
- Delusions or hearing voices

HOW DOES MENTAL ILLNESS START?

Mental illness usually starts slowly, with gradual changes in behaviour or personality. It doesn't suddenly appear out of the blue, like a person "snapping" one day. Often it is family members, friends or co-workers who first notice changes (unusual behavior or moods) in people close to them.

TREATING MENTAL ILLNESSES

Contrary to popular belief, people can't snap out of a mental illness or get over it. Mental illness is real, physical illness, and many people will need some form of treatment in order to get better.

Some common treatment options include counseling, therapy, medications, hospitalization or treatment for alcohol or drug abuse.

CAN PEOPLE STILL WORK WHEN THEY'RE ILL?

While some people may need time off work to get treatment, most will return to work once their condition is stable. Three things can help ensure a healthy return to work: a proper diagnosis; appropriate therapy; and the support of family, friends and co-workers.

WHAT CAN EMPLOYERS DO ABOUT MENTAL ILLNESS?

- Be open about mental health. Create a safe environment where workers are encouraged to talk about their workloads, stress levels and family commitments.
- Teach employees and management to recognize the signs and symptoms of deteriorating mental health – in themselves and others.
- Recognize the common causes of workplace stress. Job insecurity, inflexibility, information overload (e-mails, cell phones) and work overload (overtime, fatigue) can all create stress.
- Recognize that stress at home will eventually come to work, and vice versa. Take a whole-person approach to employee health.

- Don't add to the stigma. The vast majority of people who don't seek help for mental health problems are afraid of the reaction they'll get or the impact on their job. Make sure your organization shows how far it will go to help employees with mental health problems – just as you would for someone who has a heart attack.

WHAT CAN EMPLOYEES DO?

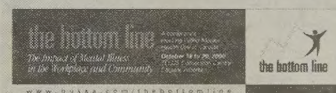

- Take personal responsibility by recognizing your own reaction to stress. Manage stress on a daily basis – instead of counting on your annual vacation as a cure-all!
- Take stock of your life and decide what you really need to create balance. Plan to make concrete changes if necessary.
- Walk the talk. Be proud about taking vacations or personal time off. And support others who need a mental health break.
- Learn more about mental illness. One in five Albertans will develop mental illness during their lifetime. There's a good chance you'll need to know more about mental illness sooner or later, so start learning now.

REMINDER TO REGISTER!

"The Bottom Line" is a two-day conference targeted to business leaders who want to better understand the financial impact of mental illness (depression, stress, anxiety, etc.) on their organizations.

ASCRA Zone 7 Fun-Day held in St. Paul

By Paul Boisvert
ASCRA

Another very successful Fun-Day was held in St. Paul when 232 members of the Lakeland Senior Games Association, Zone 7 of ASCRA, competed in eight different events. The participants came from 28 communities across the zone which extends from the Saskatchewan border west to St. Michael, and from Wainwright in the south to Fort Mc Murray in the north.

The St. Paul Senior Citizens' Centre, which hosted the event, took the opportunity to inaugurate the Bocce courts which they have developed near the Centre.

Fun Days are held every second month at a different community in Zone 7. The next event will be held at the Craigend Recreation Centre on Tuesday, November 14. In addition to the Fun-Days, the Norcen Plaque Challenge occurs at various times throughout the year. The challenge event sees participants participating in one activity only. The Centre which captures the Norcen Plaque must then host the next challenge event. On Wednesday, October 4, the next Norcen Plaque Challenge will be held in St. Michael when Military Whist will be the activity.

The major event sponsored by ASCRA is the Alberta Senior Games which will be held in Lethbridge, July 24-27, 2001. In addition to the 24 activities which make up these games, there is a Creative Writing and Visual Arts component.

Anyone who is interested in obtaining more information about how to become involved in these or other ASCRA activities should watch this newspaper for future articles or visit any senior or community centre. To find out who is the Area Director for your community, contact Eva Podlosky, Activity Director for ASCRA Zone 7 by calling (780) 645-3531.

what's NEWS at the LIBRARY?

Volunteers welcome at the library!

By Daphne Schnurer
Librarian

I would like to welcome and thank Faye Smith for volunteering at the library on Mondays. Faye is also going to be delivering books to Heritage Lodge. Also a very special thank you to Mrs. Lena Stepa who always helps me out at the library and looks after the library when I am away. Anyone else who is interested in volunteering, please give us a call. It is a great experience in many different areas, looks good on a resume and you can choose your own hours. So if you have some time to spare or are thinking about getting back into the work force, come in and check it out.

OBITUARY

WOYTOWICH, Anastasia (Nancy)

Anastasia (Nancy) Woytowich passed away on September 29, 2000, at the Elk Point Extended Care Centre at the age of 97.

Anastasia was born in the Village of Turo in Western Ukraine on September 13, 1903. She leaves to mourn 5 children, Lorraine (Marie) Woytowich of Calgary, Sue Edwards of Kelowna, B.C., Stella (Stanley) Stimson of Red Deer, Peter (Eileen) Woytowich of Victoria, B.C. and Jean Faulkner (Barry Klippert) of Cochrane; 10 grandchildren, Colin (Terry) Woytowich, Terry Mayor, Linda (Dave) Robinson, Kim (Dave) Kinders, Tracy (Glenn) Kaiser, Janice (Kevin) Vikse, Debra (Steven) Cooper, Wayne Stimson, Kevin Stimson and Christopher Faulkner; and 9 great-grandchildren. As well she is survived by 1 sister, Elena in Ukraine and by nieces and nephews and their families in North America and Ukraine. Also cherishing her memory is Lorraine's friend of long standing, Colin Penman of Calgary. She was predeceased by Onufry, her husband of 50 years in 1975; by 3 brothers and 1 sister.

Anastasia came to Canada with an infant daughter in 1929, joining her husband, who had arrived one year earlier to establish a farm and home. She never again saw her homeland and the siblings and mother she left behind. A devoted wife and mother, and a true pioneer farm woman, Anastasia toiled diligently along with her husband to ensure that her children had opportunities beyond her own humble beginnings.

A spiritual woman, industrious and resourceful, she worked with conviction and generosity to help establish and build St. Vladimir's Orthodox Church in Elk Point. For many years the church could not afford domes, but by a happy coincidence in 1987, after learning that St. Vladimir's of Calgary was rebuilding its church and the old, but fine domes were available, Anastasia was instrumental in the relocation of the domes from the Calgary Parish to Elk Point's own St. Vladimir's. The absence of an iconostas in the church had been a source of regret for Anastasia for a number of years, and following the donation of the domes, she again renewed her efforts, and received cooperation from the president and membership, to raise funds for the iconostas project. Though her memory had diminished, it was, nevertheless, with great joy in her heart that she was able to witness and participate in the blessing of the newly installed iconostas, dedicated to the glory of God in 1992.

Anastasia loved singing, and along with her husband was a long time member of the church choir. Her recollection of folk songs of Ukraine was such that in her late seventies she was used as a source for a university thesis on this subject at the University of Alberta.

Anastasia was a shy and modest woman who strived to be a good citizen, devoted to God, family and community, and in so doing gained a respected place in her community, the love of her family and surely, a place with God. May her memory be eternal.

Prayer Service Tuesday, October 3 at 7:30 pm at St. Vladimir Ukrainian Orthodox Church, Elk Point. Funeral Service Wednesday, October 4 at 10:00 am at St. Vladimir Ukrainian Orthodox Church, Elk Point. Reverend Father J. Lipinski officiating with interment in the church cemetery. If friends desire, donations may be made to St. Vladimir Ukrainian Orthodox Church, Elk Point, c/o Box 425, St. Paul, AB., T0A 3A0.
